Allied German. Soldiers Comrades

London, Mar. 28. - Mr. Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today when he opened the first foreign affairs debate in four months: "I see no reason why the Germans should not aid in the defence of their own country and Western Europe, or that American, British, French, and German soldiers should not stand in comradeship as part of a combined system of defence. There can be no hope for a United Europe without Germany, and there is no hope for Germany, except within a free and united Europe."

"Mr" Churchill "sald: "France and Britain, both sorely distressed, can combine together and this join their superior power to raise Germany, even shattered, to equal rank, . . . Then, these three countries, helping each other, conscious of their future of united greatness, and forgetting the ancient feuris and horrible deeds and tragedies of the past, can make the core or nucleus on which all other civilised democracies of Europe, bound and free, can rally and combine,"-United Press.

Abandon Malaya

London, Mar. 28. - The Prime Minister, Mr Clement Attlee, today reaffirmed that Britain's policy towards Malaya was one of "steady democratic progress towards self-government within the Commonwealth.'

He said this in the House of Commons in reply to a question by Mr Leonard Gammans (Conservative).

Mr Gammans had asked If the Prime Minister knew that the "anti-bandit" campaign in Malaya was being hampered by the lack of a clear pledge that the British Government did not intend to withdraw from Malaya.

Mr Attlee replied, "I do not see that there can be any room for doubt. I gave a clear Istatement on the Government's Karachi, Mar. 28.—Owen policy to the House on April

Approved

The Hague, Mar. 28 .---The chiefs of staff of the twelve Atlantic Pact powers approved on Tuesday a master plan for their common defence.

An official communique said they had assigned zones of responsibility to meet any possible attack. The plan, which will be submitted to the defence ministers' meeting here on April 1, was "ununimously adopted."

"The plan is based on the ugreed strategic concept of the North Atlantic Pact countries. It emphasises the responsibilities assumed by each nation to participate with the maximum forces it can provide in assuring continued security of the territories covered by the North Atlantic organisation, the com-

Speak Businessmen The

THE speeches of Mr P. S. Cassidy and I Mr S. S. Jorgensen at Monday's General Chamber of Commerce annual meeting struck what might be described as an unexpected note of optimism. This reaction is stimulated by two factors: the all-too willing acceptance of the proposition today that Hongkong is about to be cast into the dark chasm of a trade and economic depression, and the expectation, declared in the Budget, that the Colony, during the next twelve months, is going to lose millions upon millions of revenue, through roughly the same causes. We prefer Mr Cassidy's perspec-"I think," he said, "that most of us here realise that there is little to be gained by taking the long view where trade with China is concerned and that the best course is to seize opportunities as they present themselves." To which the majority of people who have been in Hongkong for a decade or more will utter a fervent "Amen," And we believe there is much profound commonsense (certainly knowledge founded on experience) in Mr Cassidy's observation that "the history of the trade of Hongkong clearly shows that the abnormal is the normal." That, too, goes for the Colony's annual revenue, which, as it has leaped up year after year (for even before the war it was consistently increasing) has, with persistent dreariness, been described as "abnormal," or given some other description meaning roughly the same thing. For their level-headed and mature observations on the recent past and the possibilities of the immediate future trade of Hongkong, the two principal Chamber of Commerce speakers corn the appreciation of the Colony. The future of this Colony, like the future of many other parts of the world, depends to a considerable extent on faith. Not blind faith, but quiet confidence based on past experience and known quantities, with a sensible evaluation of both factors. If, as Mr Cassidy points out, certain recognised trading areas before the war in the Far East no longer offer the same markets, Hongkong does not have to shut shop, nor become panicky. There are other areas, previously unexplored, but nevertheless still there. What Mr Cassidy advocates, if we read him aright, is resiliency in marketing and trading, and here, surely, Hongkong has a reputation second to none. And when it comes to "seizing opportunities" the Chinese of China proper and the Chinese and foreign traders of Hongkong possess vast and valuable experience which will stand both arens in good stead. The future, in this respect, is not half so black as the Budget and some people would have us to believe. On the critical side, Mr Cassidy, and Mr Jorgensen raised contentious points, containing plenty of debating values. Price controls was one. There will be some sympathy for the Chamber of time that controls on luxury goods were lifted. But it is interesting to note that the Chamber of Commerce agrees in principle to the retention of controls on what are undeniably necessities—all except Mr Jorgensen, who wants to see but it is not too apparent. One argument retail price.

Commerce when they plead it is high rice pass into the hands of private enterprise. There may be a case for this claim, which has been used about Government control of rice is that it becomes a monopoly. But surely this is not the most important consideration. What Hongkong wants to be certain about is that it will obtain rice regularly and in sufficient quantity. Can private enterprise, at this time, make such h guarantee? And if, nt the moment, it is necessary for Government to obtain rice on mutually agreed purchasing terms then it seems proper that Government should still control its flames immediately.

France, after 50-years of growing old faster than any nation in the world, now leads the Western world in growing young. A population expert, Alfred Sauvy, director of the Institute of Demographic Studies, points out that France's birthrate, averaging 850,000 yearly for the last four years, now outstrips that of any other Western nation.

New York Theatrical Drought Is Now Over

By Frederick Cook

New York.

New York may still be desperately short of water, but at least the theatrical drought is over. With the official season now in sight of its end, seven new plays have come to town, ranging from one hailed by the critics as a great masterpiece to others which, at best, are just so-so.

The "great masterpiece" is T. S. Eliot's all-British "The Cocktail Party," which opened at the Edinburgh Festival, had a run at Brighton, failed to find a theatre in London, and was put on here by courtesy of Mr Gilbert Miller.

Fifty percent of the people who have seen the play here seem satisfied to take the critics' word for it that they have been in on the making of a piece of dramatic history. The other 50 percent are still wandering around in a daze trying to figure out what it all meant.

'POETRY, SCIENCE'

The Broadway critics have not been much help in that direction. One of them, who claims he thinks he got the full import of "all the brilliant lines," explains somewhat uneasily that "Eliot must have been reading Einstein, for he deals with human relationships in time. He must also have been reading his Bible."

The critic indicates, however, that he concludes all came right in the end, for the result, he says, is "a synthesis of poetry, science and faith."
